What Are DSL Filters?

DSL Filter - A DSL Filter is a small box that goes between your phones and the wall jack. The filter's job is to separate the internet signal from your telephone signal. This allows the DSL Service and telephones to work simultaneously. Not only phones, but everything plugged into the telephone system will require a filter. This can include security systems, satellite TV systems, and some newer appliances.

*MPC DSL Service Plans require a major credit card for billing. Pricing available for residential, non-business use orders ONLY. AT&T phone local service required for MPC DSL Service. Offer is available for a limited period of time and is subject to change without notice. At end of term, then-current rate applies. Pricing is based on customer self-installation on an existing line. $125 additional charge if technician install is required or desired. Laptop users and some desktop users may need to purchase additional equipment. Billing begins on service activation date. DSL Service Plans not available in all areas. Actual downstream and upstream throughput speeds will vary. Acceptance of Terms of Service required. Other restrictions apply. Access speed or sync rate is measured between network interface device at customer's location and the DSL-equipped Central Office or Remote Terminal. The actual speed achieved will depend on several factors, including line conditions and loop length. MPC DSL is a Residential Class service, and may not be suitable for business purposes. MPC is an Internet Service Provider, and as a result is not responsible for structured telephone wiring or equipment. MPC is a second tier DSL provider relying on the AT&T phone network for connectivity. If more than one telephone line (number) is in the residence, a multi-line professional install may be required at additional cost. DSL introductory prices are promotional pricing and are for new DSL customers for the time period indicated ONLY. Plans revert to the non-promotional rate of 1.5M @ $24.99 per month, including current network access fees after completion of the promotional period.
